

Clara Ward

October 6, 1940 - June 14, 2015

Clara Jean Ward was born October 6, 1940 in Pickens, Mississippi. At the age of 15, she came to Chicago, Illinois.

Clara attended Wendell Phillips High School and then went on to Nursing School. After working at the University of Chicago Hospital, she decided to pursue private duty nursing.

On April 6, 1961, Clara united in marriage with Robert L. Ward and they had two daughters.

On June 11, 1972, Clara dedicated her life to Jehovah and symbolized her dedication through water baptism. Her love for Jehovah and for people moved her to share her knowledge of God's promises to all she encountered, which brought her a tremendous amount of joy.

Clara was a woman of life, laughter and love. She loved fashion, shoes, purses, scarfs and hats were always a necessity. She was straight forward and spoke from her heart. When things didn't go as planned she'd shake her head and almost sing "that's just the way it is". In time those who were close to her would say the same thing and smile.

Clara fought a long and courageous battle with sickness, which robbed her of all the wonderful things that made her so unique. On Sunday, June 14, 2015, she fell asleep in death. She was preceded in death by her husband, Robert L. Ward; one brother, Donald Braswell; and one daughter, Zavala Ward.

Clara leaves to cherish her memories, her daughter, Shellette Harris (Michael); her granddaughter, Sydney Mone't Harris; her brothers, Ronald Braswell (Tunise), Manuel Braswell Bey (Mary); and sisters, Elise Braswell, Shirley Haynes (Gregory) and Rochelle Martin; and a host of nieces, nephews and friends, whom she loved and cherished.

She will truly be missed.
